

Emerging Language Parent Training

Are you concerned about your child's language development?

By the age of 18 to 24 months, most typically developing children are able to understand about 200 to 300 words and can say at least 50 words. Children who do not reach these milestones at the expected time may be at a higher risk for developing language difficulties that could last into the pre-school and school years.

Early intervention and parent training focused on language stimulation techniques can minimize the long-term impact of delayed language development.

These Parent/caregiver Training sessions will inform you about:

- Typical communication in toddlers
- Risk factors for persistent language difficulties

You will learn:

- How to set appropriate language goals for your child
- Language facilitation techniques
- How to implement language facilitation techniques at home and in everyday situations

Why is parent training important?

- Parents know their children best
- Therapy alone is not successful without parental intervention
- Daily routines at home offer a great deal of opportunities for language stimulation
